Venerable Chaplain of U. S. Senate Happy on His Birthday.

Although he held no formal reception, Dr. Hale received many or his friends, including Senators and Representatives. many of whom have made it an annual custom to call on the Senate chaplain on his birthday.

The weight of his many years rests easily on Dr. Hale, and his interest in many charitable organizations and general work to uplift the poor, is as keen today as it was fifty years ago. Mr. Hale has never been able to accumulate wealth, and it is no secret among his friends that this is due entrely to the fact that he dispenses charity so widely and so effectively, always concealing his identity, but never hesitating to ask the assistance of friends to promote some worthy cause. Dr. Hale spends much of his time in his library, where his wife and his daughter, Miss Helen Hale, are his constant companions.

The general impression is that friends of Stoessel are behind the publication. Just how the Rech managed to get its story into print without interference by the censor is a mystery, and the impression is that some one will suffer heavily for the oversight.

The damage is done, however, and there is an immense amount of wonder-ing how the war office will escape from

NEW YORK, April 3-Mrs. Dorothy Thomas Strauss, an attractive young Harlem matron, of 319 West Ninety-fourth street, will soon sail for England to present to Queen Alexandra her claim to the Page estate, valued at several million pounds.

Lawyer Meyer Greenberg has for several nonths been putting this claim into shape for presentation in the English court. He declares Mrs. Strauss can court. He declares Mrs. Strauss can prove she is a legal heir to Page, who died intestate in England, in 1833.

According to Mrs. Strauss, the Page wealth has for many years been awaiting a claimant. Two families in the United States, the Page and Moshler families, of Evansville and Los Angeles. some time ago started legal actions to prove their claims to it.
